

Prof. Jae-Sung Kwon
Yonsei University College of Dentistry,
Republic of Korea

Jae-Sung Kwon graduated from University of Nottingham in the UK, where he studied medicine (BM BS BMedSci). He has been working as a medical doctor with full registration under General Medical Council of UK. He then studied Masters in Medical Education (MMedSci) in University of Nottingham. His career then changed as he worked as a researcher in Research Center for Orofacial Hard Tissue Regeneration Center located in Yonsei University, Korea. He gained PhD for Dental Biomaterials and Bioengineering, in Yonsei University College of Dentistry. He is currently working as Assistant Professor and Vice-Chair for Department and Research Institute of Dental Biomaterials and Bioengineering, in Yonsei University College of Dentistry. His research interests include not only the application of plasma in dental and biological fields, but also in medical devices, international standardization, biocompatibility testing and alternative test to animal studies.